Hey, Water!

Publisher: Neal
Porter Books

Hey, water! I know you!
You're all around.

faucet

sprinkler

You spray up

and down.

shower

hose

You trickle

and gurgle

stream

and rush toward the sea.

A stylized illustration of a winding river. The river is dark green with white highlights, flowing from the top left towards the bottom right. Three boats are on the river: a small grey boat on the left, a red boat in the middle, and a blue boat on the right. The banks are yellow with small green trees. The word 'river' is written in the bottom left, and 'and rush toward the sea.' is in the top right.

You cover most of the earth—salty, surging, and mysterious.

ocean

Sometimes you lie, quiet and calm,

lake

so we can splash and play
and yell in you.

pool

I stomp in you and scatter droplets everywhere.

puddle

In the morning, you wink at me from blades of grass.

dewdrop

Sometimes you slide down my cheek without a sound.

tear

rain

Sometimes you roar and pour.

Water, even when you try to fool me, I know you.

You blast and huff.

You whistle and puff.

steam

You hide in the air and drift.

cloud

fog

You drift in the air and hide

the world.

Sometimes you freeze hard as a rock—

ice cube

iceberg

a rock that floats,

or a rock we can skate on.

rink

Sometimes you freeze soft as a feather

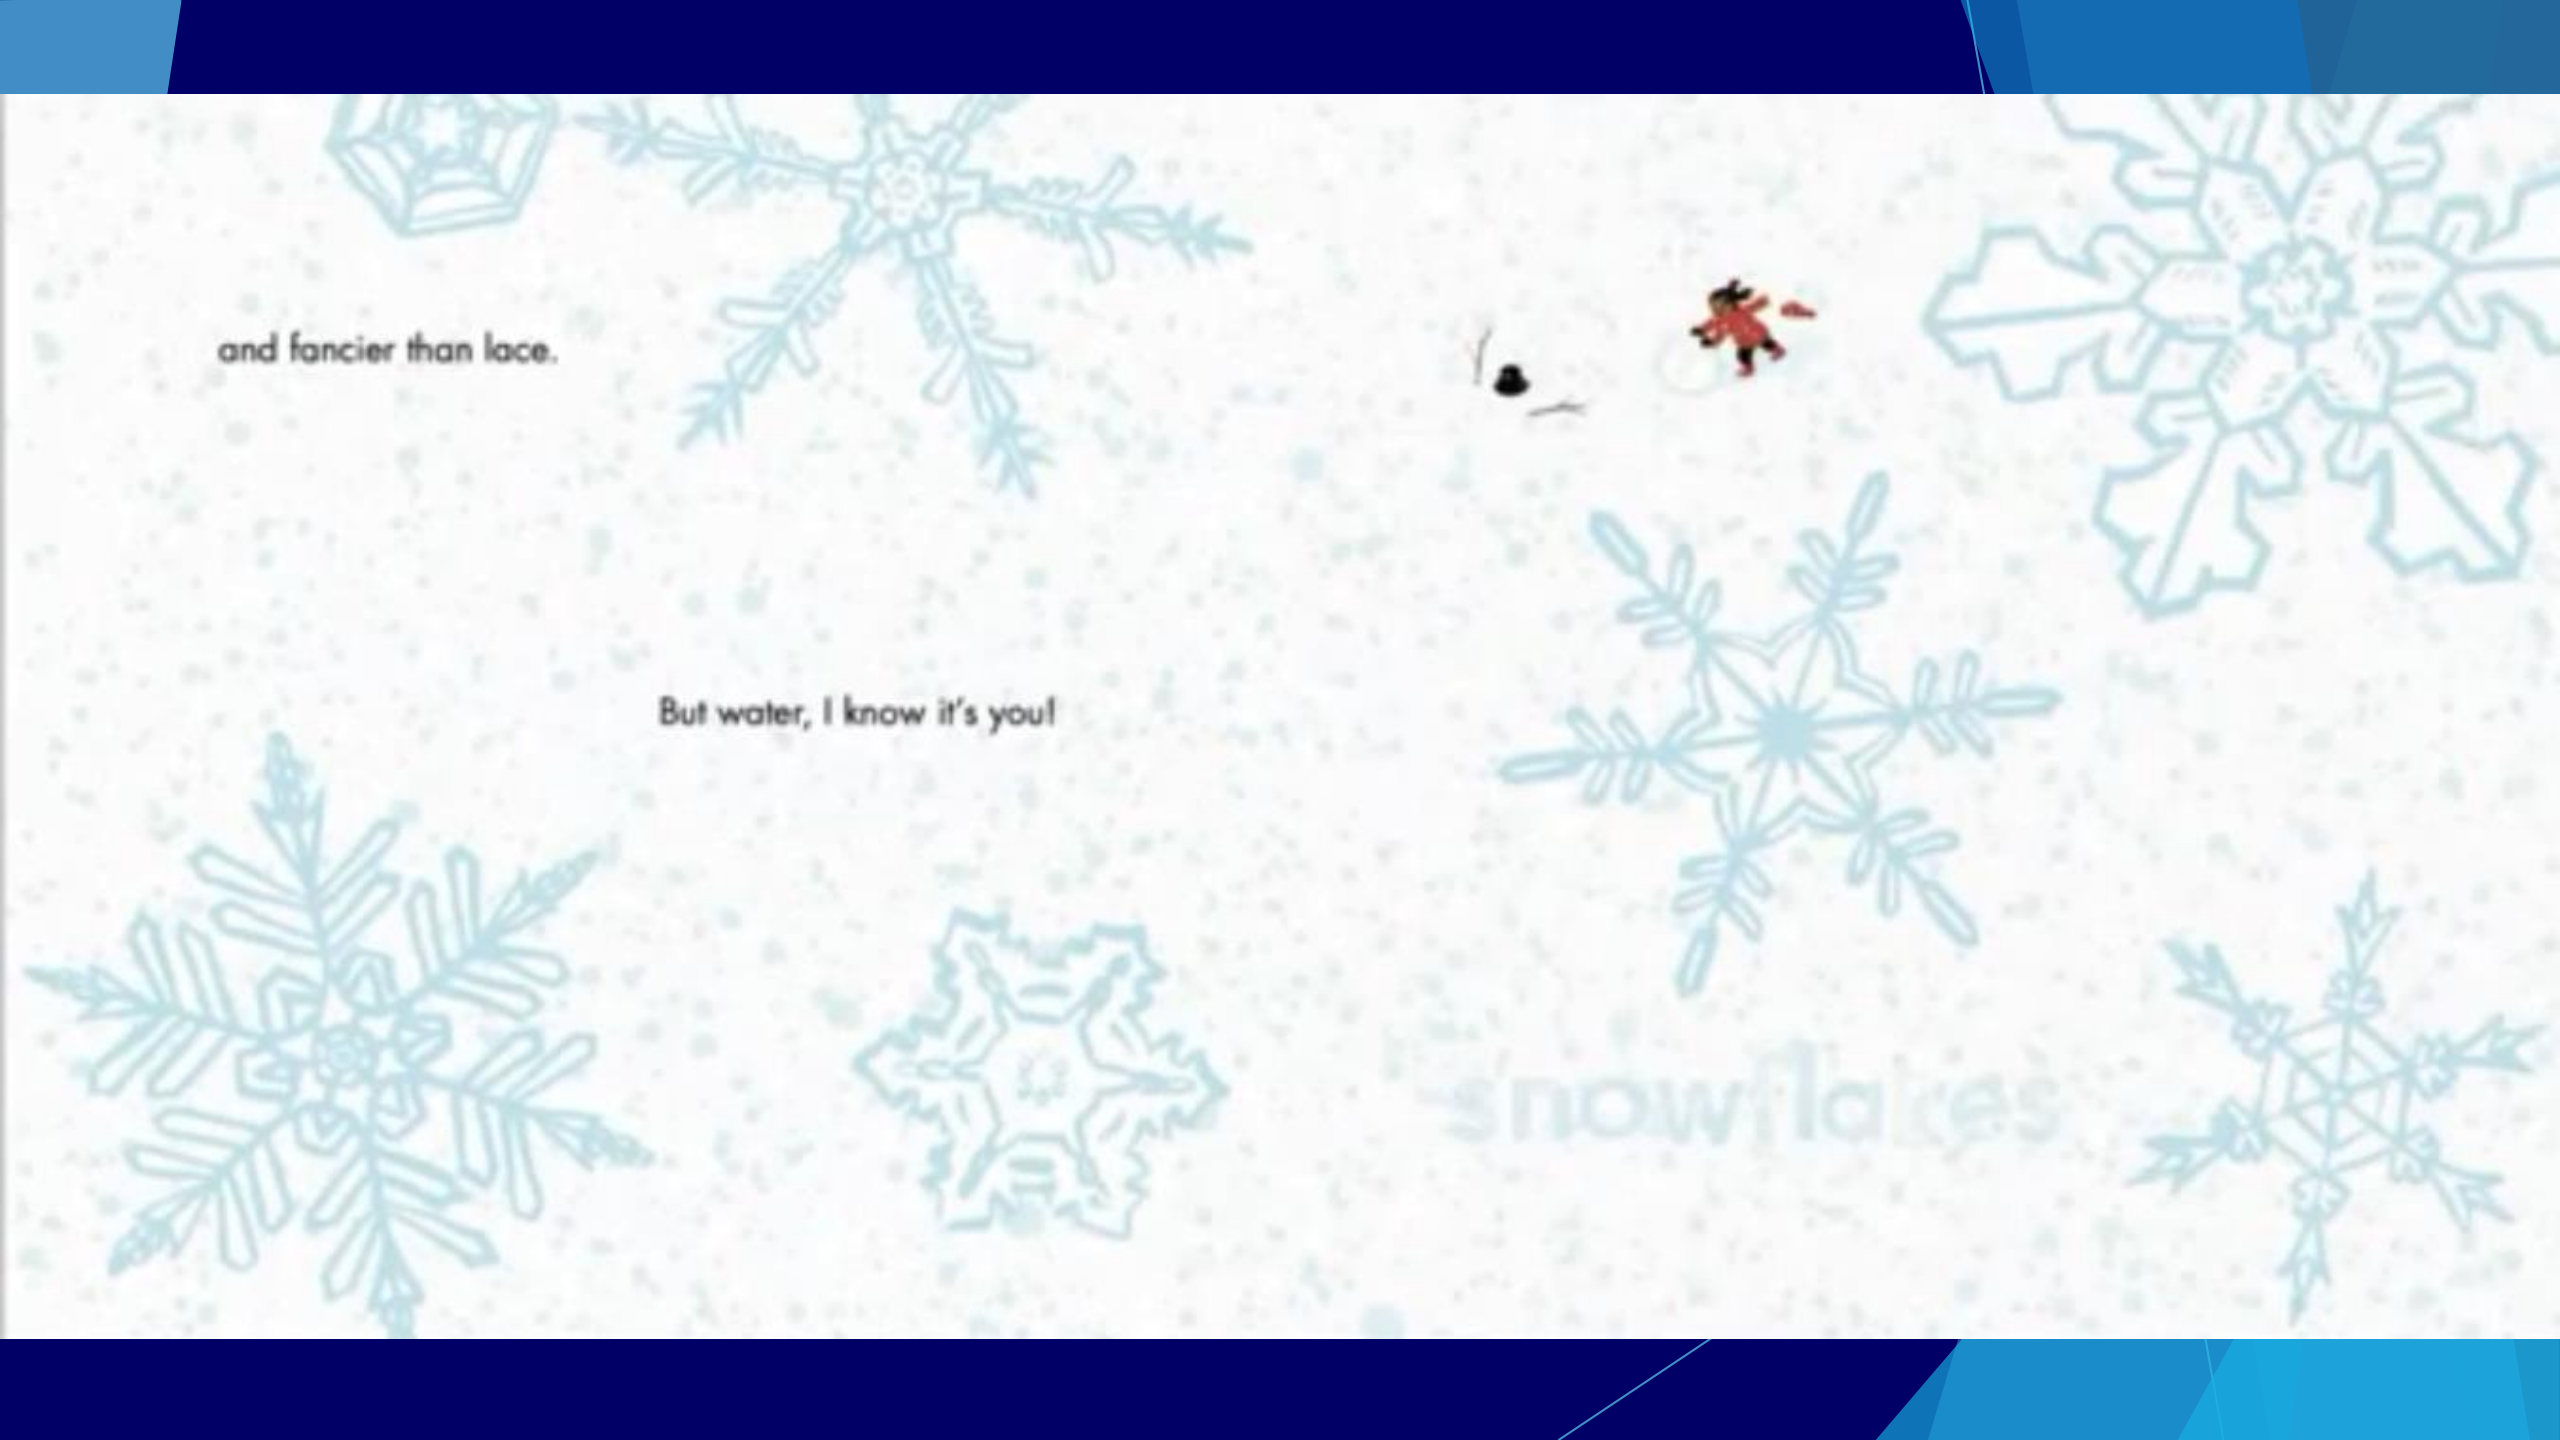

snow

and fancier than lace.

But water, I know it's you!

snowflakes

You're hiding in this funny guy, and you're hiding in me, too!

Water, you're a part of every living thing.

snowman

Zoe

bird

mushroom

plant

bug

puppy

fish

When I'm thirsty, there you are.

Hey, water,
thank you!
